Utah Arts Festival invites everybody to get into the act

Called from 8-11 generally conservative tastes or because the area are not yet widely enough known to cause a private producer to take the financial risk of presenting them. "We're trying to bring in new ideas," Bousar said.

The festival is able to take artistic risks that a private producer could not because the cost of celebration is shared by the Salt Lake County and the Utah State Office of Economic Development. Patrons pay one admission to sample all the festival has to offer on a given day.

This year's featured headliners include Walter Davis, a folk-influenced singer from the Bay Area; Nancy Orlin, a folk singer; and a folk singer from Texas who recently was profiled in People magazine. Other featured acts include the Rockers, a rock band from New York who sing original country rock and folk music; and just announced Michael Brecker. See E11 for an interview with Brecker. All but Davis will perform at 11 a.m. on the Plaza Stage.

On Wednesday, Brecker on Friday, the Rockers on Saturday, the folk singer on Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. on the Plaza Stage.

The real strength of the festival's performance schedule this year is the great lineup of acts. The festival's programming includes: Stephen Stills, "Theatre," "Habit," "Wind," "Woodbury Dance Company," "A Company of Five," "Children's Dance Theatre" and Bill Evans. Pop music acts include the Joe Maniacs and Jerry Florio/DJ Cronin big bands. The Salt Lake County Office of Economic Development is the festival's sponsor. The Utah State Office of Economic Development is the festival's sponsor.

The festival will run from noon to midnight Wednesday through Saturday and noon to 8 p.m. Sunday. Bousar said past attendance is an unfortunate economic fact of life that is hard to ignore. When the festival began 11 years ago, more than 100,000 people attended. The Utah State Office of Economic Development said the festival's attendance is expected to be between 4 and 5 percent of that number. It is a goal of the festival to be a profitable organization. It contains approximately $5 per audience member to present the event, so the difference between income from gate receipts and total expenses must be made up as private donations, Bousar said.
